Description

iDISC Information Technologies was founded in 1987 by a group of computer and business specialists to satisfy business needs in the fields of information technology and communications.

The company began its activities focusing on development, implementation, and maintenance of computer applications. This activity has broadened and diversified, now offering design, creation, maintenance, and support for environments where applications can run, both in standalone computers and in integrated local or extensive networks, allowing for the sharing of information among workgroups. iDISC's R&D department analyzes, studies and creates software solutions focused on solving information management problems.

Due to the increasing demand for technical translation and computer software localization services for the Spanish and Latin American markets, in 1990 iDISC established a translation and language services group. Our responsiveness, technical quality and service level have helped us to become a market leader. iDISC's main strength is its flexibility, and ability to handle technically demanding requests and tight budgets.

In 1995 we began providing Internet access and service, catering to the new and emerging needs of our local customers with state-of-the-art technologies. Over the years we have become a leading player in web based technologies, language and communication.

iDISC Information Technologies has more than 25 years of experience in these fields and is endorsed by more than 300 satisfied clients. We take joy in the fact that our speed, responsiveness, and ability to escalate allow us to offer the best possible services to our clients.
