Description

Mobilicer develops an intelligent patent-pending platform for smartphones - a protective cover that is also a modular hub for physical products and accessory modules.

The cover has its own battery which is charged simultaneously with the phone. The cover communicates with your phone and with removable, easily accessible function modules. The modules are connected to the cover via USB. Examples of this include: panic alarm and tracking / ant-theft alarm, or just extra battery or storage to easily transfer data, documents and images. The modules are powered from the cover and can be used interchangeably in various smartphones and operating systems.

Our products provide the user, depending of their needs, the ability to choose various additional features to its phones. This may simply be dynamic expansion of memory and battery capacity, or alarms to alert assault, theft, fire as well as tracking of people or objects. This is done with sensor technology and wireless communication. When these features are made readily available on the smartphone this will have the potential to save lives and reduce social costs.

Mobilicer is a great investment opportunity for the right investor.
